The Best of Mrs. Cleveland's New Pictures.

A Striking Likeness of the Future Lady of the White House.

To Protect Herself from "Snap Shooters" She Sat for Sarony.

The five new pictures of Mrs. Cleveland, which were published exclusively in The World this morning, were taken by Mr. Sarony on July 21 last, when she was in town with her husband to attend the hig notification meeting in the Madison Square Garden. The one reproduced in THE EVENING WORLD to-day is the most striking of the group.

These are the first pictures of Mrs. Cleveland which have been taken with the understanding that they may be distributed to the public since she was in the White House, and it was only after considerable persuasion that she consented to sit for them.

Mr. Sarony himself, is delighted with his success and declares that they are the best photographs he has ever taken. They have been copyrighted and will be placed on sale at once, so that the thousands of admirers of the future lady of the White House will soon be able to supply themselves with pictures of their favorite.

Mrs. Cleveland went to Sarony's gallery with her maid on the morning after the meeting at Madison Square Garden, and the sitting insted more than an hour. Eighteen different negatives were taken, during which Mrs. Cleveland showed the utmost patience. She left the posing entirely to Mr. Sarony, with the understanding that the proofs were to be submitted to her before any of the pictures were published, and that she should select those of which she approved. The negatives of the others were to be destroyed. Instead of sending proofs, however, Mr.

Sarony had finished pictures made from each negative, and those published are the ones selected by Mrs. Cleveland, after examining and comparing the entire lot. Something was said during the visit to the gallery about taking a picture of Baby Ruth, too, and Mrs. Cleveland promised that in the Fall she would bring Ruth to have her pic-Mrs. Cleverand's pictures show her to be even a handsomer woman to-day than when she entered the White House. There is a more matronly charm about her features and she is now in the full bloom of her beauty. The expression is one of happiness combined with that repose and quiet dignits which have rendered her so charming and attractive to all who have met her.

attractive to all who have met her.

The reason which induced Mrs. Cleveland to have these pictures taken was that she has been fairly overwhelmed of late with requests for her photograph, and posities this she has been continually annoyed by invasions of snap-Kodak flends even at Gray Ga-
